Expression of cell surface antigens of tumor cells in transgenic mice. We present here a new transgenic mouse model for the study of tumor cell heterogeneity. We engineered a transgene which encodes for a chimeric protein consisting of the transmembrane and intracellular domains of the human melanocyte-specific glycoprotein gp75 and the extracellular domain of the rat Fcγ receptor. This transgene can be expressed in all melanocyte-derived cells. We show that the expression of the transgene in tumor cell lines leads to an induction of the cell surface expression of the antigens recognized by monoclonal antibodies. The similarity of the expression pattern of these antigens in melanoma cells and
