peptides of the bonito Hirame marunensis, Pt. leuco. I. Discovery and primary structure]. Two new peptides named H2 and H3, which are homologues of pepstatin, named homoA and homoB, were isolated from fillet of bonito Hirame marunensis. The new peptides were obtained by gel filtration followed by reversed-phase HPLC with a linear gradient of CH₃CN in

0.1% aqueous TFA. The purification was performed on a Mono S column, and the sequence was determined by an Edman degradation sequence. The proteinase inhibitor contents in bonito were not affected by the addition of glycine and dithiothreitol, indicating that the inhibitor is not a single substance but rather a complex. Q: Ubuntu 20.04 is loading at 1024x768 which is too small for my display I'm having a hard time figuring this out. I'm running Ubuntu 20.04.3 on a Asus ROG Strix GL552VW-MX63 Gaming laptop. My display is a 27 inch display in a curved format with resolution of 3840x2160, connected with a NVIDIA Geforce RTX 3080 and Intel Core i7-9750H. If I run Ubuntu from my pendrive it loads normally, but as soon as I put it on the laptop it shows this: I've tried a few things but it doesn't change at all. If I open the "Displays" app, the default display is the laptop screen and the second display is not shown. I can't find where to disable the laptop display because I can't even see it in the main menu options. I can't figure this out because the options are all greyed out, the only things I can change is my resolution and the refresh rate. What can I do to revert this? A: Here is the solution as described here:
