Technical Abstract: Acute gastric dilatation volvulus is one of the most common emergency presentations at veterinary hospitals, and very few cases are reported. There is a need for additional diagnostic tests which may reduce morbidity and mortality of this condition. This study evaluated the ZD1 monoclonal antibody for the detection of IgA/IgM bound to gastric epithelial cells, by utilizing a test of serum dilution for each sample. Using this technique, the normal IgA/IgM anti-epithelial antibody range of values was defined, and the normal range
