From Indie Game Developer: Welcome to the asylum! In case you didn't already know, this is the perfect game for people who have seen films like Scream and don't like scary movies. There is no jump scares, no dark rooms, no graphic violence, no blood, no gore, no violence and nothing scary or dark is ever going to happen to you. There's just a living room and a game you can play on a virtual reality headset! Oh and a few robots. I'm sure you'll love it! This VR title is a first person horror game for the Oculus Rift that includes SteamVR support. It is set in the "nightmare" theme. You enter a room in the middle of the night and no lights are on. You are told that something went wrong with the robotics and your mission is to figure out what it was, how to fix it and how to stop it. A task that seems almost impossible. The whole game is made for low graphics and low budget so that everyone, especially you, can enjoy it. One of the most important features of this VR game is that you can play at your own pace. The game has many levels and objectives and you can complete each one at your own speed. If you don't want to complete them all in one night you don't have to! Some of the tasks will require you to watch the scene through a camera, and others to play the role of a scientist. Some require you to look for evidence, others to avoid detection. If you do find evidence you have to follow it to a special location in the game. But don't worry, if you find something you don't understand, there is a help button to explain. Or if you can't figure out how to use it, just get help from the wife! The game is playable in two modes: - Walkthrough - This is the standard walkthrough where the "narrator" tells you all the information you need to solve the game. - Adventure - This mode lets you explore the game at your own pace. The only difference between both modes is that when you play the walkthrough mode the game will open and close the door when you reach a certain location. The game uses the same score system that many video games use. Your score depends on the number of things you find or the number of steps you take. Your score can go from 100 to 999. The higher the score the Fullbuzled Jigsaw Puzzles So, I seem to be going through a bizzerrania. I've been visiting different puzzle websites quite frequently. I've been playing with some chiper puzzle games on Facebook and on Twitter. I found a nice little puzzle game app on iTunes that has six puzzle games that I play all the time. And last but not the least, most of the new bibliomaniacs I've been meeting lately seems to have downloaded either LetterPress or Foldables App in their iPhones. Letterpress is the first app I used for creating and playing with flipbooks on my iPhone and iPod Touch. I've now downloaded tons of foldables. I just have to prepare my Foldables App folder in iTunes to automatically migrate all of the Group foldables into a custom folder. There is something personal to me about committing myself to a puzzle book or a bookmark. Reading more of bibliomaniac Maroon's Ancillary Thoughts was a milestone for me. I feel so satisfied with the last couple of books I've read, that there was that small sad note of, "I wish I had read this a long time ago when it was new". When I first started the word "bibliomaniac", I automatically associated it with a weak part in my personality. I felt uneasy because I didn't have an excessive knowledge of books and literature. I didn't complete my first college coursework with the required number of books and that gave me a small sense of disappointment. About letterpress Letterpress, a concept that I came up with myself, is one of the newest bibliomaniac games I downloaded on my iPhone. It had some interesting game aspects. First of all, it is an online puzzle game. The puzzles are extremely difficult. Thus, when you play them out at home, they are that much harder. And you can access jigsaw puzzles on any puzzles website just by inserting the URL of the website you want to access. I do like that. What I like about Letterpress 2) You can play the game entirely offline as you go about your busy days. 3) You have to be careful with your puzzle solving skills. You have to be careful not to make too many bad moves otherwise the game will crash into you. 4) The puzzles in Letterpress are all based on either Jigsaw Puzzles or 9-Tile Puzzle online. 5) Letterpress handles
