If you're an old-school designer, when it comes to making site mockups, you know that the web design process can often be very time-consuming and expensive. It can take months to find a good design, communicate your vision, collaborate with other team members, and fine-tune the design until it's perfect. Most of the time, it can be easier to just make a mockup that is close to the final design you want. A simple, layered mockup can be used to visually communicate a design as a project takes shape, and it can make your life easier when choosing design elements. Some mockups can also be useful when communicating an idea for a future project, like the wireframe mockup shown in Figure 5-8. Although Photoshop is often used to create graphical mockups, you can also use it to create simple and very detailed images and animations. Creating a layered mockup Photoshop is the most popular program that is used to create layered graphic design mockups for web design. Photoshop enables you to create more realistic images, layers, and content for your mockups. You can use Photoshop to create any kind of layered or non-layered graphics in a click. While some mockup files have a large number of layers, most professional mockups are created using fewer layers and text boxes. With the help of a fast computer and a good mouse, you can create professional mockups in just a few minutes. To create a mockup using Photoshop, follow these steps: 1. Open Photoshop, and create a new document by choosing File⇒New. You can also create a new document by pressing Ctrl+N (Windows) or Command+N (Mac OS X). 2. Choose File⇒Place (Windows) or Adobe⇒File⇒Place (Mac OS X). The Place command is a useful tool for creating fast documents. You can create a new document by clicking the Place icon (see Figure 5-9). 3. The Photoshop Place dialog box opens. Simply click the folder that you'd like to use as your document, and choose the Place Tool from the drop-down menu. In the end, you can give it a File name, Location, and Size. The default size for new documents is 200x200 pixels. Just click OK and place your mouse anywhere on the screen to place the new document. If you want to create a

Brushes are typically the easiest way to create effects in Photoshop and can provide several different effects. For instance, a brush can be used to erase parts of an image, to fill a selected area with a color, or to apply a gradient to the selected area. Many Photoshop brushes are available in various sizes, and it is possible to apply a custom size to a brush. Brushes are typically categorized as one of two types: Realistic and non-Realistic. Realistic Brushes are generally larger than non-Realistic Brushes. They are most suitable for creating realistic-looking items. Non-Realistic Brushes are smaller in size and suitable for creating objects and small features. Brushes are usually flat.

Brushes are used in the following ways:

- * Create selection. Select an area by making a brush stroke.
- * Paint in an area. Paint in an area with a chosen brush. The surrounding area is painted with white.
- * Dilate selection. A brush stroke with the same size and color as the selection is applied, dilating the selection. This is useful for removing unwanted areas of the selection.
- * Paint over mask. A brush with the same size and color as the mask is applied over the mask. Paint will be applied only in the mask area.

Brush Basics

Brush size is adjustable in the Brush Options dialog box. You can also change the settings of the Brush Tool in the Tool Options Bar. Different types of Brushes are highlighted by icons on the Brush Selection tab. Brushes can be stored in a Photoshop palette. To select a Brush, click on the Brush Selection tab on the main tool bar. Alternatively, you can select the Brush Tool and hold down the mouse button and move the mouse to select a brush from the list. Using the tool, you can press the spacebar to switch to the next brush. You can select the brush you want by clicking on the brush icon or by using the mouse. When you create a brush, the standard brush size is 7px. To change the brush size, choose the brush size you want in the brush preview window. If you want to add a texture to your brush, you can adjust the brush size by typing in the text box. Instead of the brush preview window, you can also use the dialog box to save a brush. Click on the Save Brush in the Brush Options dialog

WARSAW (Reuters) - The European Union has agreed to give Poland $3.75 billion in immediate aid to fund compensation for property damaged in a World War Two German military operation, Polish Prime Minister Mateusz Morawiecki said on Thursday. Slideshow (2 images) The long-anticipated aid, announced at a signing ceremony in Warsaw, is part of a $20 billion EU aid package agreed last year after five years of talks. Poland and the EU signed a treaty on Thursday morning and agreed to an "implementation agreement" for the so-called EADS aid, including a $1.5 billion bank loan to set up a Warsaw-led fund to help Polish firms cope with the cost of war damage. Together, these funds form part of the European Union's financial assistance package for Poland aimed at boosting its economic growth. "Together we have achieved a good deal, even better than we were aiming for," Morawiecki said. "It's a tangible result. And now we are ready to do everything to help the people who had these dark times." At the signing ceremony, EU and Polish officials also agreed a deal on the terms of EU-Poland talks on migration quotas, which Poland wants to reopen this year. Poland is the most exposed EU member states in terms of migration, with more than 2 million legal and illegal migrants living in the country. The EU has been holding talks with Poland to introduce quotas limiting the number of arrivals but Warsaw has refused, saying this would undermine the EU's principles. Officials said the development of a legal basis for migrant quotas in the EU was necessary to avoid a repeat of last year's "Great Migration Crisis" when some 1 million migrants arrived in the bloc. The IMF, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the European Investment Bank are also involved in the aid package and have signed cooperation agreements with Poland. This is the first step of the financial assistance, with other funds being provided at a later stage. After the EADS aid, the EU has earmarked $8.6 billion to be paid out over the next three years.
