Legislators have restricted the practice to near-extinction, with just eight abortion clinics serving more than 400,000 women of reproductive age. But now, a bill proposed by Senator Lance Harris, a Republican who is running for governor in 2018, offers abortion restrictions so extreme that it would effectively criminalize nearly every woman who decides to end a pregnancy. The bill already has a new sponsor, U.S. Representative Steven Palazzo, a Republican in the same district. The proposed law would ban abortion at any point in pregnancy, except when the life of the mother is in jeopardy or there is a documented risk of severe and irreversible physical impairment to the unborn child. It includes no exceptions for rape, incest or when the woman is suicidal, both according to a new report by the Guttmacher Institute, a reproductive-health think tank. State Representative Greg Davis, a Republican, said that he thinks it's important for the state to protect the rights of women to choose. "You have to think about,
