The service is unavailable (Exception from HRESULT: 0x80048101) I recently created a .NET 3.5 framework class library (actually it's .NET 4.5 class library but I'm trying to make the most general question as possible) that communicates with a certain server. I use the code below to read data from a simple GET request. If it works from a browser it works great from the .NET application but I consistently receive the error described below. It seems to be an exception from "Microsoft.Web.HttpUtility", whatever the "Microsoft.Web.HttpUtility" class is. So I looked into this and it seems there's an exception at the time the class library is loaded and not then, which is why it happens in only my Windows 8.1 machine and not my coworker's Windows 8.1 machine. The error it returns looks like this So then I figured it's probably a NuGet package related problem since I did install some NuGet packages on my machine that returned the same error. So after some digging and downloading all the NuGet packages from their sources and referencing them in my solution, I tried to reproduce the problem and I can't. Yet when I delete the NuGet references they cause the same error to occur. This error occurs in both Visual Studio 2012 (Update 4) and 2015 (Update 2). Does anyone know what this error is or what I did to cause it? A: I had this problem before and it was related to the fact that I was trying to reffer to an "empty" namespace (or maybe non existing namespace at least) using "typeof". This solved the problem: In the CLR folder, rename the file to be a.cs extension (mine was System.Web.HttpUtility.cs) In the.cs file (mine was System.Web.HttpUtility.cs) delete the keywords, spaces, COMMENT and move the class name to the front of the file That's it. I have a windows server 2008 machine. Some users accidentally access the network shares and see all contents. I need to disable this (without logging off user) and only allow access to the remote desktop. In short I want to prevent users from accessing files on network shares in a web browser. Please help me out. A: You could create a group that is only allowed to access the remote desktop, disallow access to the shares (either directly or by changing the permissions on the share with a security group or similar). This will prevent anyone from clicking on a share and seeing the files unless they are logged into the remote desktop. I tested for chlamydia. There was no answer. Because I was so drunk I didn't realize it was out of my penis and into the condom. When I washed it out my penis, it started itchy and I didn't want it.
