
Enable Copy (Google Chrome) Fix

The simplest way to get this feature is to update Chrome. Google is rolling out Chrome 90 that comes with a bunch of upgrades to speed up browsing. If your update is pending, you should see a green icon at the top right corner of your browser. Click on it to update Chrome to the latest version. If you don't see this option, then you're already using the latest Chrome version. When you open a document in Reading view, you can select text a line at a time by dragging the mouse (not double-clicking). Then, press Ctrl+C (Windows) or +C (Mac) to copy text. You can paste the contents of the clipboard outside the document. When you do, the text is inserted into the new location without its formatting such as bold, italics, or a particular color. You can reapply these in the new location. When you open a notebook in Reading view you can select text just as you do in the OneNote desktop application. Then, press Ctrl+C (Windows) or +C (Mac) to copy text. You can paste the contents of the clipboard outside the notebook. When you do, the text is inserted into the new location without its formatting such as bold, italics, or a particular color. You can reapply these in the new location. The idea behind this feature is the same as Google highlighting the search results directly on web pages (in yellow). The copy link to text feature does exactly that but lets you highlight the text and share the link. This link will take the receiver straight to the highlighted text on the webpage. Here are all of the ways you can get this feature today: With Opera, you can customize your keyboard shortcut as you please so you won't have any more copy-paste issues.
